

Chapter 4: Falling Water

95th Day

April 4th

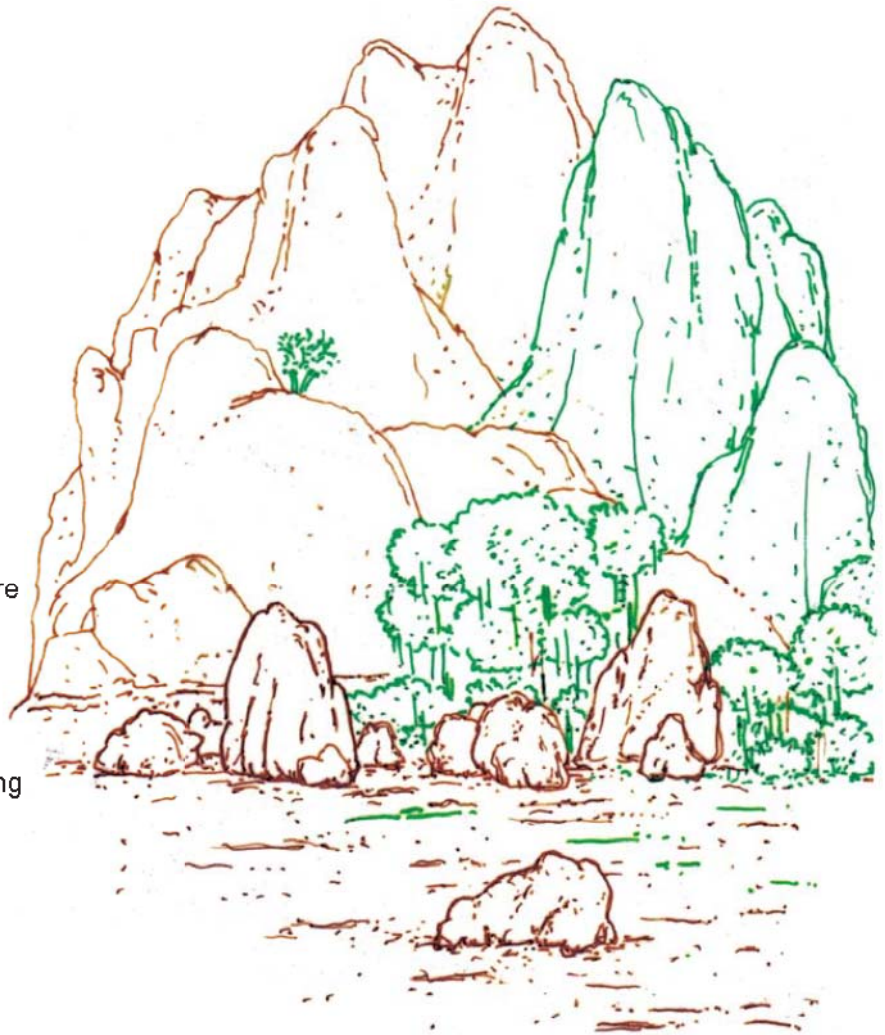

Is

There is no god
and there is no you;
There just Is.
And that Is is the Tao
And that is all there really is.

By separating god from you
And you from god.
There no longer Is,
But that is all there really is.

All there really exists Is
And Is is all there really is.
You are not here and you are not there
You do not exist; you just Is.
That is funny, but that is all there is.

In true reality you do not exist;
But you are always chasing something
That does not really exist.
For your existence is within you
And that existence is the Tao.

Commentary:

The Is is presence - being - nothing higher or lower, everything is one. No separation from you or anyone. We are all one, lost in time and space, but found in the oneness of nothingness. To live without separation is to live in the oneness of the universe which is really what is. To be present is being here and now, which is what really is. We are caught in an endless chasing of what really is not until we look within to find what truly is, and that is the Tao.
